National Center for Peer Support

The Gold Standard of Peer Support Models is Now Available for your Area

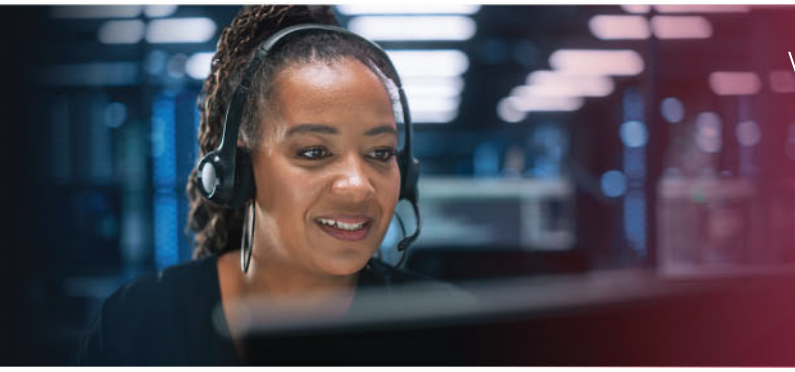
The National Center for Peer Support (NCPS) serves as a center of excellence, promoting the use of best practice peer support models to address the current mental health crisis in the U.S.

NCPS combines the world-class operations of the Rutgers University Behavioral Health Care Call Center with academic excellence and the best service provision available. This model has provided a strong foundation on which to build peer support programs nationwide and is now available to build programs in your area.

Peer support has emerged as a solution to system limitations by targeting cultural competence and access to care to address behavioral healthcare challenges.

The National Center for Peer Support is home to over 14 different peer support programs for First Responders, Caregivers, Educators, Child Protection Workers, Healthcare Professionals, and the Military Community. Each program provides:

- Peer support by professionally trained Peer Support Specialists
- Access to Provider Network & Referrals
- Critical Incident Stress Management (CISM) Response
- Training Unit - suicide prevention, wellness and resilience resources
- Access to state-of-the-art call center infrastructure



We can help you with our proven, award-winning, evidence-based program recognized by SAMHSA.

If you'd like to start a program in your state, call The National Center for Peer Support at 833-727-5463 or visit our website at nationalpeersupport.com
